THE FIREHOUSE SUBS STORY

Firehouse Subs was founded by Robin and Chris Sorensen, two firefighting brothers cut from the cloth of a family legacy with over 200 years of combined firefighting experience. In 1994, Robin and Chris decided to create a restaurant built firmly on the pride and honor of one of the firehouse's most storied traditions – making great food.

For those that haven't been in a firehouse around dinner time, meals are an event. The kitchen is a place for camaraderie, great food and massive appetites. And if it's your turn to cook, you'd better make something hearty, filling and most importantly, delicious. Because if you don't, you'll have a room full of some of the toughest men and women on the planet breathing down your neck. Talk about pressure. So it's safe to say that our sandwich recipes have passed some pretty brutal taste tests. And if given the chance, we think they'll earn your stomach's respect too.

The association of great food and the firehouse is a simple one. Fire personnel are on call 24 hours a day. So you can't just go out to eat whenever you please. You have to be at the station, on guard, ready to roll on a moment's notice. That means meals are made onsite. Food becomes a focus. A sanctuary of sorts. And the result is some incredible, home-cooked cuisine.

That's the kind of food our founders, Robin and Chris Sorensen, served up when they cooked in the firehouse. Big, satisfying subs loaded with freshly sliced meat, plenty of toppings and a unique flavor like nothing you've ever tasted before.

So stop by a Firehouse Subs near you and taste the tradition.
