History of the "Grinder" Sandwich

The "Grinder" was born on America's East Coast during the World War I era. Italian immigrants opened small sandwich shops near the shipyards where great warships were being built. The tasty homemade sandwiches they served were the favorites of the workers who ground off rivets while making the metal warships. The friendly shop owners affectionately referred to these workers as "grinders" and the ever popular sandwiches took the name and became known as "Grinders."
